Island of Joy Island of Joy The Land of Dr. Dog Little King's Journey Life Outta Here Vanilla Twilight All The Pieces In Between Live from the Bayou "Amazingly strong and fascinating, a wonder of riffs, melody, and detailed texture." (Wynton Marsalis) "All the Pieces In Between is one of those CDs you just never want to run out of." (Falling James) "(All the Pieces In Between) is a gem, a beautiful celebration of one artist's singular vision.... We want more... please, go on." (Artist Underground, Top 100 Albums of 2014) "[All the Pieces In Between] is a novel idea, one well-explored.... It's a simple, coherent album, and one of the best of the year." (No Depression) "All the Pieces In Between is a beautiful, soulful album. Dr. Dog has put together an honest and beautiful piece of work." (Precursor) Q: Why does the USA have more than twice the number of citizens per house than most of the EU countries? As you can see, the population of the USA (from 2014) is 323,775,000 (Wikipedia). The population of the European Union (EU, from 2014) is 528,386,000 (Wikipedia). This means that there are 1,219,382 or 4,711.7 inhabitants per 1000 inhabitants in the USA, while there are 1,843 or 20.9 inhabitants per 1000 inhabitants in the EU. Now, let's consider the USA, which has higher population density than France, Germany, Italy, Belgium or Switzerland! The population of the USA is increasing and the number

Q: Recommendations for a mathematician who is friendly but not interested in participating in collaboration My university offers a huge amount of funding for research and development. I am pretty sure that with the money, we will be able to fix (at least partially) most deficiencies in the courses listed on the website of the university. However, in this opportunity, I am not aiming for Ph.D. It looks like some departments really care about who will work with them, and they do care about the amount of cooperation. I am comfortable with this type of collaborations, as long as I will write the final paper. My point is that here, I am not looking for collaborators, nor do I really care that much when it comes to the fact of finding a collaborator. So what are the good options of formal studies in mathematics when doing Ph.D.? Do you have good suggestions about classes and areas? Edit: My field is algebra and topology. A: Seriously, this question is a bit subjective, but 1) In general, mathematics is a "good" fit for somebody who has completed some undergraduate study of mathematics (especially if the study is not quantitative) and is interested in mathematics. As mentioned in the comments, some other advanced undergraduate courses might be helpful. That being said, it is hard to provide specific feedback about what area to study. One way to get started, however, is to do some online searches on research methods. Specific topics listed in journals or other published materials might also be helpful. A course of study in research methods can be very helpful for anybody, independently of their interest in a specific area of mathematics. 2) Chances are, you will not be looking for a specific candidate for Ph.D. work. Whether you ask for collaborators depends a lot on your department and expectations. Questions about this type of work should be directed to the department that you are applying for.
